

Obituary

Died: Monday, September 30, 2019

T'iaira Charday Cox earned her wings on September 30, 2019, at the young age of 28.

T'iaira was born February 25, 1991, in Detroit, Michigan to her parents Charlotte Cox and the late Matthew McBride. Growing up with siblings, Mariah and D'Yante Cox, T'iaira was a loving and goofy soul with a beautiful smile and big heart. With a heart for Christ, and having moved to Indianapolis, Indiana, she was baptized and remained a member of Olivet Missionary Baptist Church. She sang in the Youth and Mass Choir.

Academics was an area T'iaira excelled beyond measure. Reaching the dean's list, maintaining straight A's, T'iaira went on to graduate from Broad Ripple High School with honors (Class of '09). Following high school, T'iaira attended the Art Institute, majoring in fashion design, and allowing her to explore her creative talents. She enjoyed design, drawing, and fashion production all while enrolled. Like the ambitious young lady she was, T'iaira worked from the age of 15 years.

The fuel of her hard work only increased on May 2, 2011, when she gave birth to twin girls, Jordynn and Journey Cox. With a new determination to find her purpose, T'iaira pursued her passion for design enrolling at Tricoci University and becoming a licensed nail technician. This led to the entrepreneurial foundation of her brand "The Nail Doll". Her hard work and dedication towards her brand landed her a role in one of New York's' most talked about events, "New York Fashion Week". Here she worked as a nail technician to models from all over the world. Self investment was one of her top priorities taking many nail and business classes post graduation.

Her memories will be cherished by her daughters, Jordynn and Journey Cox; her mother, Charlotte Cox; brother, D'Yante Cox; sister, Mariah Cox; nephew, Kiyan Cox; god-mother, Phyllis Jones; god-sisters, Shatella Jones-Bey, Sharika Jones-Bey, Kynnidi Jones, Courtnie Taylor, and Alysa Davis; god-daughter, Lyric Joyce Hudson, best friend, Arteia Shelton, and other loved ones.
